

Ignore the official route because to get to it you'll have to carry your bike over a bridge and there is a nasty right turn out of the station. Instead, go out of the station through a gate next to the ticket office and then down a short, tree-lined alley to the north end of Victoria Road.

You may have to wait for a while for a break in the traffic to turn out of Victoria Road onto Crosshill Road.

Every cyclist's dream: a right turn across sometimes fast-moving traffic coming the other way at the top of a slope. Signal early and clearly before moving into the middle of the road. Don't be surprised if drivers overtake you on your right while you are signalling to move across.
