Skirted round the south of Berlin this morning following the Mauerweg – as the name suggests, a path where the Wall used to be. Bit overcast but v pleasant Sunday morning through pretty suburbs and peaceful countryside with runners, dog walkers and other cyclists... but every so often we passed an orange post with details of people who had died trying to get over the wall at that place. I can't think of anything to say that isn't trite. We then got a bit lost in downtown Potsdam but finally powered on down the Europadweg R1 to this lovely old town. About 63 miles. Not too bad! — with Bruce Ryan at Bad Belzig.

Eleanor Emberson My legs are not loving it so much, but we're doing fine. Slow going at times while we navigate and cope with some, ahem, variable surfaces but mostly the roads and paths are great.
