Eleanor Emberson

So, we made it. As Bruce has said, 466 miles or so cycled since Berlin, with 215 of these in the last three days. I'm quite pleased with that but also pleased not to be back in the saddle for another 70 miles tomorrow. Today's cycling was hot and tiring but meandering through vineyards and fields of corn, wheat, rye and sunflowers, with also steep cliffs and picturesque ruins at times on both sides of the river. The photo has one of the prettier ruins and, if you look closely, some of the terracing for the vines.

We were almost in Vienna before we saw any significant aftermath of the flooding, which was just some drifts of sand covering paths on one side of the Donauinsel, the long, narrow island in the middle of the Danube. Very impressed by this given how much of the area we cycled through was under water only 6 weeks ago. The receptionist at the hotel in Melk said they had all the mess cleaned up there in 5 days!

Now for some R&R in Vienna. Hope the weather is holding back in Scotland, too. — with Bruce Ryan at Wien Leopoldstadt.
