

Who can see this?

After rather more decades than I care to remember, finally made it to Neuschwanstein today. We were well warned about the crowds and queues so out before 7.30am for the bus. We did the tours of Hohenschwangau Castle and Neuschwanstein, walked further up the hill to the Marienbrücke and then back down a mountain bike trail to the village and the museum. The tours didn't linger, but were very well-organised and the castles were impressive, if also slightly oppressive. Would living in a castle like that make you insane or do you have to be insane to commission the building of the castle? Regardless, it's easy to see why so many people visit. So, I have completed something from my bucket list today and thoroughly enjoyed it. Dinner and beer now!

Eleanor Emberson Only a little atmospheric mist, Lucy, but stories of the suspicious demise of poor Ludwig don't have a magical edge when told by a very smiley, round-faced guide with a strong Bavarian accent. August 31 at 5:07am · Like · 1
