Jackpot again! Zürich appears to be ace for vegans. In the oldest continually operating veggie restaurant in Europe (since 1898). Here's what we had

Drinks: soya chai and a local 'dunkel' (not dunkel as in 'black as pitch', more like a cider in colour)

Starters: ELLY - buffet, charged by weight (you weight your full plate, get a ticket with the weight and cost, then at the table the waiter adds this to your tab). Too many choices to list. BRUCE - crispy tofu with salad. Amazing chutneys and sauces with it.

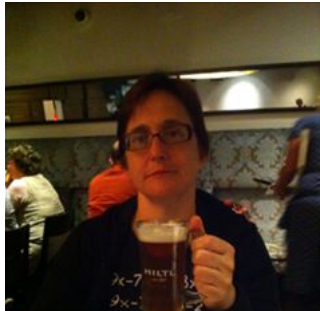

Mains: Rösti (like hash browns but much nicer) and veg, rendang (south-east asian 'beef' stew) made of textured tofu, mushrooms, courgettes with short-grain rice. Unbelievably good. Textures and tastes fantastic

Pud: from the weight-it-yourself buffet. Cakes to cry and die for, at least 2 vegan. Ginger/carrot cake with vanilla won by a short head. I'm just not used to having so many brilliant choices.

And then to top it all, we found the Apotheke in the main station was open, so I could continue my habit of buying knee supports on continental cycle-trips. I even got measured for it.

Also exploring by tram: just meandering where we could rubber-necking. A very good day.
